All amounts assume no withdrawals have been taken. Please review accompanying disclosure pages carefully before making a purchase decision. Nassau Income Accelerator is issued by Nassau Life and Annuity Company.

This Personal Output quote provides you with potential withdrawal ("income") guarantees provided by the Guaranteed Minimum Withdrawal Benefit rider(s) shown and according to the specified age of the youngest Covered Person, single premium, contract year of rider exercise (if applicable), rider coverage option (single or spousal) and the withdrawal criteria selected and assumes no other withdrawals are taken. The rider only guarantees an annual withdrawal from the annuity and in no way guarantees the Accumulation Value.

One of the following income riders must be elected at the time of application. Each rider includes different features that determine the amount of guaranteed income payments when you exercise your rider:

- Income Horizon: Early. Provides level guaranteed lifetime income payments upon rider exercise. This rider may be suitable for individuals seeking to begin income payments immediately or within the first few years after purchase.
- Income Horizon: Later. Provides level guaranteed lifetime income payments. This rider may be suitable for individuals seeking to begin income payments four years or more after purchase.
- Flex-Forward Income Benefit. Provides the option to receive higher guaranteed income payments ("Early Income Amount") for up to 8 years ("Early Income Period") in exchange for lower income payments for the remainder of the contract ("Lifetime Income Amount"). This rider may be suitable for individuals desiring higher guaranteed income payments early-on in exchange for lower income payments later.

All income rider options include an annual increase (called a "Roll-Up") and an immediate bonus added to the Income Benefit Base which can increase future guaranteed income payments each year you wait to exercise your rider. A bonus equal to 10% of your premium payment is added to the Income Benefit Base when the contract is issued. This initial Income Benefit Base (equal to the single premium plus the Income Benefit Base Bonus) is then increased by 10% simple interest Roll-Ups until the 10th contract anniversary (or until you exercise the rider, whichever comes first).

All income rider options include an additional annual fee equal to 0.95% of the Income Benefit Base and is deducted from the Accumulation Value. The rider fee may increase any time after the 10th contract anniversary but will never exceed 1.50%. The dollar amount of your fee will increase as the Income Benefit Base increases. In years when the annuity contract earns little to no interest, the fee could result in a partial loss of principal.

It is important to remember that the Income Benefit Base is a number used solely to calculate rider fees and withdrawal benefits and is not a guarantee of the Accumulation Value or an amount available for withdrawal.

Two options are offered for each rider:

- Single Life Option. Payments cover only one life, and will continue until the death of the Covered Person
- Spousal Life Option. Payments cover two spousal lives, and will continue until the death of the surviving spouse. The requirements for Covered Persons must be satisfied in order to elect this option.

Withdrawals prior to rider exercise, and any withdrawals above the guaranteed withdrawal amount after rider exercise (excluding Required Minimum Distributions, or "RMDs") will decrease the Income Benefit Base in the same proportion as the reduction to the Accumulation Value (not dollar for dollar) and will also reduce future income payments. Withdrawals above the annual Free Withdrawal Amount (10% of the Accumulation Value), guaranteed withdrawal amount, or RMD (if applicable) may also be subject to charges, fees and adjustments. Therefore, withdrawals prior to rider exercise or above the guaranteed withdrawal amount (or RMD) after rider exercise can severely reduce or may exhaust future rider benefits. If the Accumulation Value is reduced to zero due to income payments or rider fees before the death of the eligible Covered Person(s), income payments will continue for life. If the Accumulation Value is reduced to zero for any other reason, the rider will terminate and any guaranteed income payments and fees will end.

Income payments are considered withdrawals from the annuity and will reduce the Accumulation Value, Cash Surrender Value and death benefit. Income payments guaranteed by the rider are subject to the following conditions (this is a summary only and you should review your contract and the Product and Rider Disclosures for complete terms and conditions):

- The income benefit base must be greater than zero
- The eligible Covered Person(s) must be alive. See definitions of Covered Person(s) above for the Single Life and Spousal Life Options
- The youngest Covered Person must be older than the Benefit Eligibility Date at the time of rider exercise

INCOME HORIZON: EARLY or LATER

The Income Horizon: Early and Income Horizon: Later riders guarantee that each rider year after the Benefit Eligibility Date withdrawals may be taken up to the Annual Benefit Amount (ABA) for the life of the Covered Person(s). The ABA is a percentage of the Income Benefit Base and is dependent upon the age of the youngest Covered Person at issue, age of the youngest Covered Person at rider exercise and whether you elect a Single or Spousal benefit. The ABA percentage also may be different depending on which version of the rider is chosen.

The ABA values shown for each year prior to the specified year of rider exercise are the guaranteed withdrawal amounts if you were to begin taking withdrawals within that year. The ABA values shown for each year on and after the specified year of rider exercise are the guaranteed withdrawal amounts payable for life if no excess withdrawals are taken.

FLEX-FORWARD INCOME BENEFIT

This rider provides annual guaranteed income payments of a specified amount upon rider exercise: Early Income Amount during the Early Income Period, and Lifetime Income Amount thereafter. At the time of rider exercise, the length of the Early Income Period (from 0 to 8 years) can be selected, as well as the Early Income Amount. When the Early Income Period ends, the rider will provide annual guaranteed income payments equal to the Lifetime Income Amount. The longer the Early Income Period or the more income elected in the Early Income Period, then the lower the Lifetime Income Amount will be.

The Early Income Amount is subject to a minimum and maximum. The minimum Early Income Amount is equal to the ABA and the maximum is equal to the Maximum Early Income Percentage multiplied by the Income Benefit Base. The youngest Covered Person must be age 70 or below to be eligible for the Early Income Benefit. If the youngest Covered Person is age 71 or older (or if you do not elect to receive an Early Income Amount) at the time of rider exercise, payments will be set at the Lifetime Income Amount.

The Lifetime Income Amount is equal to the Income Benefit Base multiplied by the Lifetime Income Percentage. This percentage is determined on the date you exercise the rider and will never change. The Lifetime Income Percentage is equal to the ABA Percentage, less A x B x C, where:

A = Early Income Percentage less the Annual Benefit Amount Percentage

B = Early Income Period

C = Lifetime Adjustment Factor, as shown in your rider.

This quote does not show the impact of taxes. Any withdrawal (including but not limited to Early Income Amount payments) may be subject to taxation as ordinary income and if taken prior to age 59 1/2, may be subject to a 10% IRS penalty. If your annuity qualifies as a Traditional IRA, failure to comply with minimum distribution requirements can also result in penalties. The calculation for any RMD amount indicated on this quote (if applicable) is based on the previous year's ending Accumulation Value less any applicable rider fees, and does not take into consideration the value of benefits provided by any additional riders. Therefore, keep in mind that any RMD amount shown is a projected amount that could be higher or lower. If the actual RMD amount that you must withdraw is higher than the amount included on this quote, the remaining Accumulation Value will be correspondingly lower. Consult your tax advisor for assistance.
