Here are a few things to be aware of on color and the printing process.

First and foremost

Print is a manufactured process, so there will always be slight variations in color. Printers have an acceptable level of color variance when they print a job, usually 5% - 10% in color shift. Slight variations are common and sometimes unavoidable.

Color will print differently depending on a variety of factors:

Color model used
(RGB, PANTONE, CMYK)

Printing process used
(digital or offset)

Material printed on (paper, vinyl, fabric)

Texture or finish of the product
(coated or uncoated paper stock)
